Both the objectives are language for more power/influence. You have your clear areas of responsibility as to Westminster, overlaps should be minimal. Stop trying to grandstand and pretend you are what you clearly are not.

A) After last referendum you told us you now had the tools to do the job - WELL DO IT". Why are you wasting time and money on this political exercise where the Wales political class will be the only benefactors.

B) Stop interfering in matters outside your competence and get on with doing your jobs.

C) Stop trying to get more AMs we don't need them, if you embrace B) above work load falls, and if you still need help utilise our MPs to scrutinise they have less work now and still on full pay, they can do it in HoC rooms and if need be teleconference (no costs).

D) Again referring to B) listen to the people we voted EU out stop campaigning/working for a watered down solution, or a special Wales solution, we are part of UK whatever the solution is, it will be for all of us across the UK and will be decided by HMG and a parliamentary vote including Welsh MPs.

E) Stop wasting time, money and legislation re Welsh language, most of us don't speak it, have no need or desire to do so. It is clearly costing a fortune, destroying education in EM schools and is purely a tool to lead to being able to say we speak a different language here so are no longer part of UK (more political power). It isn't going to happen.

F) Sort education out again our PISA rating are a disgrace.

G) Sort GDP your efforts are paltry and EU money (well UK money recycled really) wasted on non jobs, being eligible for it is embarrassing.

H) You all have just disgracefully accepted a huge pay rise, so get on and do the job, or shut the whole devolution edifice down, the share of the grant it takes to run should be spent on us the people of Wales not you.

Ymchwiliad i ddysgu rhyng-sefydliadol

Annwyl Huw

Diolch am eich llythyr yn rhoi gwybod i'r Pwyllgor am eich ymchwiliad i gysylltiadau rhyng-sefydliadol rhwng Cymru a'r DU.

Yn sgil eich llythyr, trafododd y Pwyllgor y mater hwn yn ei gyfarfod ar 25 Ionawr. Ein barn ni yw bod trefniadau cadarn ar gyfer gwaith rhyng-seneddol a chysylltiadau rhwng Pwyllgorau Seneddol yn hanfodol ar gyfer gwneud gwaith craffu effeithiol, a hefyd yn gallu hwyluso'r broses o gyfnewid syniadau a gwella'r broses o ddysgu am bolisiâu. O ran cylch gwaith ein Pwyllgor ni, mae hyn yn arbennig o wir, er enghraifft mewn perthynas â materion trawsffiniol ym maes iechyd a gofal cymdeithasol.

Rydym hefyd o'r farn bod lle i wella o ran y ffordd y mae adrannau Llywodraeth y DU yn cydweithio â phwyllgorau'r Cynulliad mewn perthynas â chraffu ar faterion polisi lle ceir gorgyffwrdd rhwng meysydd datganoledig a meysydd nad ydynt wedi'u datganoli. Mae'n ymddangos bod y math hwn o gydweithio yn aml yn cael ei ysgogi gan weithgarwch Gweinidog neu was sifil unigol yn hytrach na dealltwriaeth gydnabyddedig bod y math hwn o gydweithio yn hanfodol a bod ganddo'r potensial i fod o fudd i bawb sy'n ymwneud â'r materion o dan sylw.

Rydym yn deall, er enghraifft, fod y Pwyllgor blaenorol wedi wynebu heriau wrth geisio ymgysylltu â Gweinidog a swyddogion perthnasol y Swyddfa Gartref yn ystod ei ymchwiliad i sylweddau seicoweithredol newydd, a hynny mewn perthynas â rhai meysydd polisi nad ydynt wedi'u datganoli ond a oedd yn uniongyrchol berthnasol i'r ymchwiliad. Cafodd mater hwnnw ei ddatrys yn y pen draw, gyda thystiolaeth lafar ac ysgrifenedig yn dod i law—ond dim ond yn dilyn ymdrechion di-ri i ymgysylltu gan staff y Pwyllgor a gohebiaeth gan Gadeirydd y Pwyllgor bryd hynny.

Rydym yn croesawu ymchwiliad y Pwyllgor Materion Cyfansoddiadol a Deddfwriaethol i'r mater pwysig hwn, ac rydym yn edrych ymlaen at glywed eich casgliadau maes o law.

Response from: The Country, Land and Business Association

The CLA (Country Land & Business Association) is a well-established representative organisation with UK headquarters in London and a national office in Wales. We work closely with both the UK Government and the Welsh Government as a consultee-of-choice on issues concerning agriculture, land-use and the rural economy.

We devote ourselves to addressing our members' interests in rural affairs: the gamut of agricultural interests and also those affecting the rural economy in general. A key part of our role is consistently to engage with government and political representatives in Westminster and Cardiff. We represent 32,000 members in England and Wales, around 10 per cent of whom are in Wales. The needs of the rural community are often under-represented in UK politics. Our membership footprint accounts for the ownership/management of around half of the rural land in both countries. About 80 per cent of land-use in Wales is consigned to farming and rural business. A significant number of our members are rural business-people who have diversified into other sectors of the rural economy. Some members' land, farming or business interests straddle the England-Wales border.

Key Principles

Brexit will have a major impact on our members' interests. We have identified key areas where it is likely to bring about fundamental change in support for agriculture, regulation, trade-deals and the international movement of labour. Consequentially it is our assertion that:-

1. A new and improved UK Food, Farming and Environmental policy–framework must be created which supports the rural economy. The central UK policy should make sure that internal trade–barriers are not created directly or indirectly.
2. It is essential that the needs and contributions of each part of the UK are recognised within the framework. Each country has its own distinct challenges and opportunities and must be allowed to respond to these within the over–arching policy framework. A formal platform to do this is essential.
3. The policy is supported by a new, UK, ring–fenced budget which is distributed to devolved government on a needs–based basis, which is able to develop and execute a range of policies within the devolved settlement for the benefit of Welsh farming and the Welsh rural community.
4. Wales should have proportionate influence over the trade deals developed by UK Government that affect the country’s principal product streams. Securing long–term sustainable markets is key for the viability of the industry.
5. Recent Welsh legislation has created a strong foundation for Natural Resource Management in Wales. This should continue to be the cornerstone for land–use policy which looks to deliver public benefit in a sustainable way, balancing the economic, social, cultural and environmental challenges we face.
6. Workers from the EU play a vital role in a number of sectors in agriculture and the food and drink supply chain. UK Government must ensure that the Welsh economy is not penalised by any restriction in employing skilled or specialist migrant labour where this is well–established.

Political, economic and legal implications

Brexit presents challenges in inter–governmental relationships between Wales and the UK. Wales has no formal role in EU negotiations and in brokering trade-deals with individual EU countries or other countries/economic blocs. The Welsh Government's document, Securing Wales' Future does refer to "current inter-governmental machinery which will no longer be fit-for-purpose," and, it says, "new ways of working" will need to be forged. We would support the view that the current devolutionary settlement will require appropriate attention in order that the devolved government does have meaningful practical role.

The UK framework for agriculture must be consistent with devolution as set out in the recent Wales Act. The UK Government in Wales plays an important role in representing the country at UK Cabinet level and dovetailing UK and devolved government so it works efficiently and effectively. A focus for development may be in the Joint Ministerial Committee. This provides a helpful forum for creating and carrying out strategy. As structures of UK and devolved government develop, we must ensure that means of holding our ministers accountable – both individually and collectively – is not compromised.

EU competences & the devolved administrations

A strong practical foundation has already been established in Welsh law via the Environment (Wales) Act and the Wellbeing of Future Generations (Wales) Act both of which received Royal Assent last year. The Wales Act was considered as the final piece of constitutional change for a generation. Brexit is important, but it should not affect the fundamental structure and principles of government within the UK. The Great Reform Bill should flow from and should not dictate to this legislation. We await clarification as to how the Great Repeal Bill will tackle issues of devolved responsibility. It should also acknowledge that Brexit does create some practical issues between the institutions and respect those elements of the existing constitution without bringing about wholesale change.

Clearly opportunities exist to improve inter-parliamentary dialogue. As things stand the representative bodies do not take part in each-other's Consultation exercises and members of the UK Parliament and devolved Assembly do not give evidence in each-others' Committee Inquiries. It does seem inevitable that this gap may be bridged in some way at some point.

Conclusion

Sustaining continuity of existing mutually beneficial relationships with the EU or its members is a key practical issue for the rural community in Wales. We must take advantage of a well-established devolved settlement and a firm basis in existing Welsh legislation in confronting these matters. Wales is a rural nation – about one-third of the population lives in the countryside, rural landowners invest over £1.3 billion per year into the rural economy. The needs of the rural community must be considered within the Brexit-Devolution process; we will be pleased to expand on this written submission in oral evidence.

Inquiry: A stronger voice for Wales: engaging with Westminster and the

Ymateb gan: Prifysgolion Cymru
Response from: Universities Wales

1. About Universities Wales

1.1. Universities Wales represents the interests of universities in Wales and is a National Council of Universities UK. Universities Wales' Governing Council consists of the Vice-Chancellors of all the universities in Wales and the Director of the Open University in Wales.

2. Introduction

2.1. On 20 December 2016, the National Assembly for Wales' Constitutional and Legislative Affairs Committee launched its call for evidence on its inquiry into inter-institutional working, 'A stronger voice for Wales: engaging with Westminster and the devolved institutions'.<sup>1</sup> The inquiry is focussing on two strands: constitutional matters and policy matters

2.2. We welcome the opportunity to contribute to this consultation. Universities need an effective framework for engagement at a Wales and UK level that facilitates the development of appropriate devolved and UK policy in relation to higher education.

2.3. Higher education brings widespread benefits for individuals, communities, and the nation as a whole. It has the capacity to transform the lives of individuals and communities, to catalyse social mobility. Welsh universities are internationally recognised for the high quality of their teaching and attract a high number of students from around the world, extending the experience and horizons of the nation and enriching our cultural heritage. Welsh universities are a leading academic destination for world class research, with more than three quarters of the research recently assessed to be ‘world leading’ or ‘internationally excellent’. The transformative effect of higher education also provides the foundation for Wales’ long term economic growth. Welsh universities contribute billions of pounds to the nation’s economy and create tens of thousands of jobs, generating some 3% of the nation’s GDP and earning a significant share of its much-needed export earnings.

2.4. Devolution means that decisions on higher education policy can be made in Wales to take into account Welsh needs. The policy and legislative framework for higher education in Wales has become increasingly distinct in recent years, and offers many potential advantages. Further devolution has enabled Wales to respond to major changes across the UK with its own fee, funding and student support policies, and to support these with major changes to the regulatory framework for higher education in Wales.

2.5. Although higher education is a devolved subject, however, many constitutional and policy arrangements relating to higher education remain UK wide and the reality is that universities compete within an international higher education market with policy influenced by both decisions in Westminster and factors outside the UK. The success of universities in Wales and across the UK, is dependent, not only the successful development of devolved policy but our ability to work with our colleagues across the UK and beyond to rise to the challenges of rapid global expansion of higher education, seen as a key driver of many competing economies. It is essential for our ability to attract students and staff, to secure research opportunities and funding, and to forge the partnerships that are necessary for international success.

2.6. We offer the following comments in the hope that it will assist the Committee in its task of identifying best practice for the future.

3. Strand 1: Constitutional matters

3.1. Our experience is that effective inter-governmental and inter-parliamentary arrangements are crucial for good legislative practice. Higher education has been a key area for legislation in Wales and other parts of the UK in recent years, and further legislative change which affects Wales will have to be successfully negotiated.

3.2. Under current devolution arrangements, higher education is a devolved subject, and has been a key area for legislation in Wales since the National Assembly acquired powers to enact its own legislation. The Higher Education (Wales) Act 2015, in particular, introduced major changes to the regulatory framework for higher education in Wales. Much of the key legislative framework for higher education, however, remains enacted as UK legislation. In particular, Education Reform Act 1988 and the Further and Higher Education Act 1992 continue to provide a framework for constitutional and funding arrangements that apply to higher education (with some differences) in both England and Wales. The UK Parliament retains the power to legislate in relation to higher education in Wales, and will continue to do so under the Wales Act 2017. Any changes to this common legislative framework affect Wales.

3.3. Notably, for instance, the Higher Education and Research Bill (HERB), which is progressing through the House of Lords at the moment, contains provisions relating to higher education in Wales specifically as well as provisions that apply to England only, and to the UK as a whole. If enacted, it will mean that, for the first time, there are different constitutional arrangements between England and Wales for such matters as arrangements for the grant of university title, degree awarding powers and the role of the Privy Council. The constitutional provisions applying to higher education corporations (i.e. post-1992 universities) will also be different within the UK. Much of this difference is highly desirable from a university perspective, but it presents a significant challenge and burden for Welsh officials who undertake their duties well.

3.4. For legislative proposals originating in Westminster, this raises two key issues from our perspective.

3.5. The first issue is that, pre-legislative consultation can be reduced. As we noted in relation to the current Higher Education and Research Bill, for instance, the proposals for Wales could not be clear in the UK Government's White Paper.<sup>2</sup> The proposed changes for Wales were not identifiable until the Bill itself was laid. Even then the changes, which were not discussed in the accompanying commentary, could only be identified by detailed work tracing the impact of the consequential amendments on other legislation. This made it very difficult for Wales to comment on or contribute to developments for Wales, even though the legislative process necessitated that they must be actioned at same time.

3.6. We note that the challenges in the consultation process that this presents for higher education in Wales are not new. Similar shortcomings in the consultation process for legislation relating to higher education in Wales were identified, for instance, in the Richard Commission Report which informed the Government of Wales Act 2006, and the legislation which led to the Higher Education Wales Act 2004.<sup>3</sup>

3.7. The second issue is that the National Assembly for Wales does not play a direct role in the scrutiny of legislation relating to higher education in Wales that originates in Parliament.

3.8. By convention, the UK government seeks approval of the National Assembly for Wales, and – in accordance with the Assembly’s standing orders – this is given in the form of a legislative consent motion. As confirmed by a recent Supreme Court ruling, this is a political imperative, rather than an enforceable legal obligation.<sup>4</sup>

3.9. For practical purposes, the greater challenge is arguably that the Assembly does not get the opportunity to fully scrutinise legislation relating to higher education in Wales as whole, even though it is devolved, and has limited opportunity to contribute to the consideration of specific amendments in Parliament. We raised a number of issues concerning the drafting of amendments to HERB in our response to the LCM consultation, for instance. The CYPEC Report drew attention to these but commented that

“in the time available, it has not been possible for the Committee to consult more widely or follow up the stated concerns with the Cabinet Secretary.”<sup>5</sup> Our experience is that Committees of the National Assembly play an important part in the scrutiny of higher education legislation in Wales, and were instrumental to securing improved legislation in the case of the Higher Education Wales Bill by contrast.<sup>6</sup>

3.10. In turn, dealing with two different institutions and governments is more difficult for stakeholders such as universities. This can be the case even when both are being helpful and cooperative – as demonstrated, for instance, in relation to recent Wales Bill, which led to important amendments relating to the classification of universities in the new devolution settlement.

4. Strand 2: Policy matters

4.1. Policy decisions in England, Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales, have an impact on each other that merit discussion and careful consideration before major decisions are taken. The need to develop policy with cross border ramifications in mind is essential. Whilst each nation may have a different approach, governments should work together to increase understanding of the differences and what each of the policy contexts mean in practice to different groups. UK nations must be able to successfully compete in the global market. For the HE sector in Wales to work to the best of its ability with partners in other UK nations, and across the world, maintaining productive and efficient intergovernmental relations is crucial.

4.2. Even when policy decisions do not directly relate to Wales it is important to recognise that their implementation can have major consequences for other nations. For instance, the policy decisions arising from the UK government’s recent White Paper on HE (and HERB) will significant consequences for the UK-wide HE infrastructure, such as Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE), the Student Loans Company (SLC), and the Higher Education Statistical Agency (HESA) et al. which currently have UK-wide responsibilities in a number of areas. In particular, difficulty in implementing Welsh-specific loans policy through the SLC points to significant potential practical issues and tensions.

<sup>5</sup> Children, Young People and Education Committee: Report on the Legislative Consent Memorandum for the Higher Education and Research Bill – 12 January 2017 (see here), including Universities Wales’ response.

4.3. Recent funding and student support changes in England, for instance, have necessitated major reforms in fees, funding and student support in Wales. Given the need for separate legislative processes, the key process issue is to ensure that other nations have time to respond in a way that enables devolved arrangements to be put in place without significant time delays or compromise to the process of scrutiny that would adversely impact on students or institutions.

4.4. Particular consideration should be given to the development of research policy as it relates to Wales. “Research Councils’ are expressly excluded from the devolved subjects in the current legislation (and will be reserved under the Wales Act 2017). At the same time, other aspects of research policy are devolved. A key part of the current proposals of HERB, for instance, is to strengthen the UK research arrangements by subsuming the current Research Councils within a new over-arching body called UK Research and Innovation (UKRI). The dual-funding system will continue to operate as it is at the moment with core funding and general research policy a matter for individual nations, and UK competitive funding and policy dealt with through UKRI (although details of how the budgetary aspects of this will currently operate for Wales remain unclear).

4.5. A key issue we highlighted is that the current proposals for UKRI in HERB rely on a traditional model for determining and delivering UK policy. We have questioned whether this is effective in meeting national interests, given the stage of devolution that has now been reached. Universities in Wales have supported a number of amendments put forward to address issues in relation to the membership of UKRI, consultation and policy development.<sup>7</sup> These have not been accepted as yet, although further opportunities to consider amendments remain. If these amendments are not accepted, it will be all the more important that the current internal processes and structures for engagement of UKRI are strengthened. We should say that we fully support UK Research Councils (RCs). Indeed, given the status of the grants they award, they are essential if we are to retain and attract research staff. For this reason and others, hypothecation or further devolution of RCs simply would not work. However, we need to ensure that they are informed and led from policy across the UK.

4.6. Another major area of UK policy that will have a particular impact on Wales is the negotiations regarding the exit of the European Union and the arrangements that will take its place. As discussed in more detail in our submission to the External Affairs and Additional Legislation Committee,<sup>8</sup> the mobility of staff and students and the European Structural and Investment Funds play a crucial role in supporting universities, and in turn the national economy in Wales. As the third largest recipient of structural funds in the last round, universities are very exposed to the withdrawal of this funding. It is crucial that this funding for infrastructure and capacity-building is maintained, regardless of whether this comes from the EU or national budgets through Barnett. It will clearly be vital for universities, as for the nation more generally, that Wales has an effective voice in the process of negotiating terms both within the UK and internationally.

5. Some possible ways forward

5.1. In addition to potentially strengthening the legislative process, it will be important to ensure that the protocols for engagement with Westminster are effective and implemented. The memorandum of understanding between the UK Government and the devolved administrations sets out the principles for current engagement. The memorandum, which currently dates from 2013, covers communication, consultation, the exchange of information and other matters. Any modification of the arrangements should take into account the following:

- Effective communications relating to the different policy contexts, for example how the different fees and funding regimes in the different UK nations operate, is critical.
- A more structured approach to intergovernmental relations, with regular meetings between ministers responsible for HE from the UK Government and devolved governments would be welcomed – to ensure all relevant parties are aware of developments under discussion, and the potential impact of these.
- A greater clarity at the UK Government level about the interaction between devolved and non-devolved policy areas and the impact on universities;
- Future processes for engagement at governmental and institutional level must ensure that policy developments of one nation are not at the expense of another and that this engagement allows Wales to pursue its own policy options through UK-owned infrastructure.
- In particular, there is potential to examine the terms and conditions of grant to UKRI, or the development of service level agreements to ensure that issues of representation and devolved policy interest are dealt with effectively.
- The end result of the above should result in transparent legislative and policy implications for devolved/other nations, and allow timely consultation on them.

Annwyl Huw,

Llais cryfach i Gymru: ymgysylltu â San Steffan a sefydliadau datganoledig

Diolch am eich llythyr dyddiedig 17 Ionawr 2017. Roedd aelodau o'r Pwyllgor Plant, Pobl Ifanc ac Addysg yn awyddus i ymateb i'ch galwad am wybodaeth ynglŷn â gweithio rhyng-sefydliadol. Mae fy sylwadau ar gyfer y Pwyllgor Materion Cyfansoddiadol a Deddfwriaethol yn ymwneud yn uniongyrchol â Ffrwd II: Cysylltiadau rhyng-sefydliadol ar faterion polisi.

Mae'r Pwyllgor yn awyddus i sefydlu cysylltiadau gwaith da â phwyllgorau cyfatebol yn Senedd y DU a'r gweinyddiaethau datganoledig ar faterion o ddiddordeb a phryder cyffredin. Yn benodol, rydym yn credu ei bod yn bwysig iawn sefydlu cyswllt â gwaith ar iechyd, tlodi a cham-drin plant mewn rhannau eraill o'r DU drwy archwilio eu hymyriadau hwy. Mae llawer iawn o gyfle i'r Pwyllgor ddatblygu cysylltiadau â phwyllgorau cyfatebol yn Holyrood, Stormont a San Steffan. Rwyf wedi trafod hyn â staff y Pwyllgor ac rwy'n awyddus iddynt archwilio i feysydd y gellid ymchwilio iddynt ar y cyd â gweinyddiaethau eraill.

Er mwyn rhoi syniad o'r cefndir ichi, aeth Pwyllgor Plant a Phobl Ifanc y Pedwerydd Cynulliad ati'n benodol i gynnal gwaith y tu allan i Gymru. Un cam nodedig a gymerodd y Pwyllgor oedd cyfarfod â Quality and Qualifications Ireland a'r Scottish Qualifications Authority cyn cyflwyno'r Bil Cymwysterau (Cymru). Gwnaeth hyn gyfraniad allweddol at lunio dull y Pwyllgor o gynnal y gwaith craffu, ac yn y pendraw at lywio ffurf y corff cymwysterau newydd.

Mae'n werth nodi hefyd bod y Pwyllgor wedi ymweld â'r Sefydliad ar gyfer Cydweithrediad a Datblygiad Economaidd (OECD) yn ei bencadlys ym Mharis. Cyfarfu'r Pwyllgor â'r rhai sy'n gyfrifol am y Rhaglen Ryngwladol Asesu Myfyrwyr (PISA), ac adolygiad OECD o system addysg Cymru. Gwnaeth yr ymweliadau hyn gyfraniad hollbwysig at lunio ein dull o graffu gan ddylanwadu, yn eu tro, ar bolisiâu Llywodraeth Cymru.

Gan fynd yn ôl at yr Ail a'r Trydydd Cynulliad, cynhaliodd y Pwyllgor Addysg a Dysgu Gydol Oes rywfaint o waith canfod ffeithiau ym maes polisi gyda'r gweinyddiaethau datganoledig. Ystyriwyd bod y gwaith hwn yn hanfodol o ran llywio ymchwiliadau a gwaith cynllunio.

Bydd llawer o'r materion polisi y bydd y Pwyllgor yn eu hystyried yn debyg iawn i faterion mewn rhannau eraill o'r DU, Ewrop a thu hwnt. Fel y cyfryw, rwy'n credu'n gryf y byddai gwaith ein Pwyllgor yn elwa ar ddatblygu gwell cysylltiadau rhyng-sefydliadol. Byddem yn croesawu unrhyw gyngor neu gefnogaeth gan eich Pwyllgor i'n cynorthwyo i gyflawni hyn.

Yn gywir,

Lynne Neagle AC Cadeirydd

Y Brifysgol Agored yng Nghymru

1. Sefydlwyd y Brifysgol Agored yn 1969 a chofrestrodd y myfyrwyr cyntaf yn 1971. Mae'n arweinydd byd-eang o ran cynnig cyfleoedd dysgu o bell hyblyg ac arloesol ar lefel addysg uwch. Mae'n agored i bobl, lleoedd, dulliau a syniadau. Mae'n hyrwyddo cyfleoedd addysgol a chyfiawnder cymdeithasol drwy gynnig addysg brifysgol o safon uchel i bawb sy'n dymuno cyflawni eu huchelgais a gwireddu eu potensial.
2. Mae dros 7,000 o fyfyrwyr dros Gymru gyfan yn astudio gyda'r Brifysgol Agored ar hyn o bryd, ac maent wedi'u cofrestru ar oddeutu 10,000 o fodiwlau. Mae myfyrwyr y Brifysgol Agored ym mhob un o etholaethau Cynulliad Cymru a ni yw darparwr addysg uwch israddedig rhan-amser mwyaf blaenllaw'r wlad. Mae bron dri o bob pedwar o fyfyrwyr Y Brifysgol Agored mewn cyflogaeth tra eu bod yn astudio a chyda pholisi derbyniadau agored, nid oes angen unrhyw gymwysterau i astudio ar lefel gradd. Mae dros draean o'n myfyrwyr israddedig yng Nghymru yn dod atom heb gymwysterau mynediad safonol i brifysgol.
3. Fel arweinydd byd-eang ym maes technoleg addysg, mae ein portffolio 'cynnwys agored' eang yn cynnwys unedau astudio am ddim ar y llwyfan dysgu am ddim OpenLearn (gan gynnwys llawer o ddeunyddiau sy'n gysylltiedig â Chymru a'n llwyfan Cymraeg OpenLearn Cymru) a chynnwys sylweddol ar YouTube ac ar iTunesU lle mae ein heitemau wedi cael eu lawrlwytho dros 70 miliwn o weithiau.

4. Y Brifysgol Agored yw'r unig sefydliad addysg uwch sy'n gweithredu ym mhob un o bedair gwlad y DU ac sy'n cael arian bob un o'r pedair llywodraeth. Mae strwythur unigryw'r Brifysgol Agored yn ein galluogi i ymateb i flaenoriaethau'r llywodraeth, a chael ein dwyn i gyfrif yn briodol, ym mhob gwlad a sicrhau y gall graddfa a chyrhaeddiad byd-eang gweithgarwch y Brifysgol Agored gael eu darparu er budd myfyrwyr ym mhob un o wledydd y DU. O ganlyniad i'n presenoldeb ledled y DU rydym mewn sefyllfa unigryw o ran y cyfleoedd a'r heriau sy'n gysylltiedig â'r polisïau gwahanol a geir ledled y DU. Mae'r profiad a'n hymrwymiad parhaus i ddarparu addysg rhan-amser o ansawdd uchel ledled y DU yn llywio ein hymateb i'r ymchwiliad hwn.

Maes un – Materion Cyfansoddiadol

5. Mae Addysg Uwch yn faes polisi datganoledig ac eithrio'r Cynghorau Ymchwil. Fodd bynnag, mae cydberthnasau cymhleth a phwysig rhwng meysydd datganoledig a meysydd heb eu datganoli sy'n effeithio'n uniongyrchol ar brifysgolion yng Nghymru. Mae'r rhain yn cynnwys yr incwm a gânt o ffynonellau ac eithrio'r cyngor cyllido a'r amgylchedd cystadleuol ar gyfer recriwtio myfyrwyr ac arian ar gyfer gwaith ymchwil. Yn achos y Brifysgol Agored, er bod ein myfyrwyr yn astudio drwy ddysgu o bell ac y gallant wneud hynny mewn unrhyw un o bedair gwlad y DU mae'r polisïau gwahanol ar gyfer AU ym mhob gwlad a'r cyfundrefnau ariannu cysylltiedig yn golygu bod lefelau ffioedd a phecynnau cymorth i fyfyrwyr yn wahanol ym mhob un o wledydd y DU. Dylai hyn gael ei ystyried yn un o ganlyniadau cadarnhaol datganoli yn hytrach na phroblem, ond mae'n gofyn am gydgyssylltu, cydweithredu a chyfathrebu ar draws llywodraethau a rhyngddynt.
6. Mewn ymateb i gwestiynau penodol a ofynnwyd gan y Pwyllgor am faterion cyfansoddiadol hoffem ddatgan ein cefnogaeth i ymateb Prifysgolion Cymru i'r ymchwiliad hwn. Mae ymateb Prifysgolion Cymru yn nodi sawl enghraifft o feysydd sy'n destun pryder sy'n ymwneud â deddfwriaeth yn y sector AU ac rydym yn cytuno â'r pryderon hynny. Mae hyn yn cynnwys gallu Cynulliad Cenedlaethol Cymru i graffu ar ddeddfwriaeth Seneddol sy'n ymwneud ag AU yng Nghymru.

7. Er enghraifft, yn ddiweddar bu'r Brifysgol Agored yn gweithio gyda'r Swyddfa Gymreig ac aelodau o Dŷ'r Arglwyddi i ddiwygio Bil Cymru er mwyn nodi statws y Brifysgol Agored fel sefydliad Cymreig yn gliriach yn y ddeddfwriaeth. Gan fod cylch gwaith y Brifysgol Agored yn cwmpasu'r DU gyfan nid yw hyn yn hawdd ond rydym yn awyddus i sicrhau y byddem yn ddarostyngedig i ddeddfwriaeth ynglŷn ag AU yng Nghymru gan ein bod yn rhan bwysig o'r sector AU yng Nghymru gan gydnabod ar yr un pryd sefyllfa unigryw'r Brifysgol Agored fel sefydliad sy'n cwmpasu'r DU gyfan. Roedd y materion hyn yn gofyn am gydberthnasau rhynglywodraethol effeithiol rhwng swyddogion Llywodraeth Cymru a'r Swyddfa Gymreig. Nid yw'n glir bod y mater hwn yn rhan o unrhyw ystyriaeth wreiddiol a roddwyd i'r Bil drafft nes iddo gael ei nodi gan Brifysgolion Cymru.
8. Rydym yn cefnogi'r argymhelliad yn ail adroddiad Comisiwn Silk mewn perthynas ag addysg uwch, sef:

“Yng ngoleuni'r cydberthnasau clos a chymhleth yr ydym wedi'u nodi a'r posibilrwydd y gwnaiff newidiadau i bolisiau yn Lloegr ddylanwadu'n gryf ar Gymru, cynigiwn y dylid sefydlu fforwm rhynglywodraethol ffurfiol i sicrhau cyd-ddealltwriaeth ynglŷn â materion polisi ym maes Addysg Uwch, o fewn fframwaith Pwyllgor rhynglywodraethol Cymru. Yn ogystal â chyflawni rolau eraill, byddai'r fforwm hwn yn darparu gwybodaeth yn fuan am newidiadau a gynigid a byddai'n hybu rhagoriaeth a'r gallu i gystadlu'n rhyngwladol.”<sup>1</sup>

Yn ein barn ni, mae'r argymhelliad hwn yn haeddu cael ei weithredu o hyd a gall fod yn rhywbeth y gallai'r Pwyllgor ei ystyried fel rhan o'i ymchwiliad.

Maes dau – Materion Polisi

9. Mae gwahaniaethau rhwng polisiau yn un o ganlyniadau naturiol datganoli ac mae'r Brifysgol Agored wedi ceisio ymateb yn effeithiol i'r cyfle i weithredu ym mhedair gwlad wahanol y DU. O ganlyniad, rydym yn monitro polisiâu'r pedair llywodraeth yn barhaus ac yn ystyried lle mae meysydd lle y ceir gwahaniaethau y mae angen i ni ymateb iddynt a lle y ceir synergeddau. Mae'r Brifysgol Agored yng Nghymru yn ymateb i'r cyfeiriad polisi a bennir gan Lywodraeth Cymru a Chyngor Cyngor Cyllido Addysg Uwch Cymru ond rydym hefyd yn ymwybodol o ddatblygiadau mewn mannau eraill sy'n effeithio ar ein gwaith yng Nghymru. Mae'r gallu i asesu, deall ac ystyried canlyniadau'r datblygiadau hyn cyn gynted â phosibl yn bwysig i ni wrth i ni lunio ein hymateb ac unrhyw wybodaeth y mae angen i ni ei throsglwyddo wedyn i'n myfyrwyr a'n sefydliadau partner.

10. Mae angen prawfesur polisiâu yn effeithiol o safbwynt pedair gwlad y DU drwy eu cyhoeddi a'u rhoi ar waith ac mae cyfathrebu rhwng llywodraethau yn allweddol i hyn. Ni ddylid gwneud cyhoeddiadau sy'n effeithio ar feysydd datganoledig heb gynnal trafodaethau â'r gweinyddiaethau perthnasol ymlaen llaw ac ystyried union gwmpas unrhyw benderfyniad polisi yn llawn. Mae enghreifftiau diweddar megis yr Ardoll Prentisiaethau a strategaeth ddiwydiannol Llywodraeth y DU yn feysydd lle y byddai gwell cydgysylltu a thrafod rhynglywodraethol cyn i bolisi gael ei gyhoeddi fod wedi sicrhau bod y polisi yn adlewyrchu'r setliad datganoli yn well ac y byddai wedi bod yn haws i'r rhai â buddiant yn y broses o'i roi ar waith fod wedi deall y goblygiadau. Yn yr un modd, byddai cyhoeddiadau Llywodraeth y DU ar feysydd megis y Fframwaith Rhagoriaeth Addysgu yn bendant wedi cael budd o fwy o weithgarwch cydgysylltu rhynglywodraethol.
11. Agwedd arall ar y gwahaniaethau a geir rhwng polisiâu yn y sector addysg uwch yw gallu cyrff yn y sector megis y Cwmni Benthyciadau i Fyfyrwyr i ymateb i wahanol flaenoriaethau o ran polisi ac addasu eu systemau yn unol â hynny. Mae adroddiad terfynol yr Adolygiad Annibynnol o Drefniadau Cyllido Addysg Uwch a Chyllid Myfyrwyr yng Nghymru ('Adolygiad Diamond') yn nodi bod pryderon sylweddol yn hyn o beth. Dywed:

Mae'n bosibl, er gwaethaf y trafodaethau adeiladol sydd bellach ar waith rhwng yr SLC a Llywodraeth Cymru, y bydd y

gwahaniaethau cynyddol rhwng blaenoriaethau polisi pedair llywodraeth y DU yn parhau i roi pwysau ar allu'r SLC.<sup>2</sup>

Aiff yr adroddiad ymlaen i ddyfynnu Pwyllgor Tŷ'r Arglwyddi ar y Cyfansoddiad sy'n cynnwys yr argymhelliad canlynol:

...[the UK Government] should be engaging with the devolved administrations across the whole breadth of government policy: not interfering, but co-operating and collaborating where possible and managing cross-border or UK-wide impacts that may result from differing policy and service delivery choices.<sup>3</sup>

12. Felly, mae adolygiad Diamond yn argymhell:

- Y dylai Cydbwyllgor Gweinidogion y DU, ar y lefelau uchaf, ystyried cydgysylltu polisi cyllid myfyrwyr rhwng gweinyddiaethau'r DU yn well, heb leihau effaith penderfyniadau datganoledig. Croesawn barodrwydd y Cwmni Benthyciadau i Fyfyrwyr i fynd ati gyda Llywodraeth Cymru i edrych am opsiynau i weithredu argymhellion yr adroddiad hwn yn ddi-oed.
- Yn dibynnu ar ganlyniad y gwaith ar y cyd hwnnw, mae'r Panel yn argymhell bod ystyriaeth yn cael ei rhoi i gwmpasu system newydd o weinyddu benthyciadau i fyfyrwyr yng Nghymru.<sup>4</sup>

Rydym yn cefnogi'r argymhellion hyn yn gryf ac yn gobeithio y byddant o gymorth i'r Pwyllgor wrth iddynt ystyried materion rhynglywodraethol.

13. Byddem hefyd yn cyfeirio'r Pwyllgor unwaith eto at argymhelliad y Comisiwn Silk mewn perthynas â "fforwm rhynglywodraethol ffurfiol i

Sut y mae dulliau rhyng-lywodraethol wedi effeithio ar ddatblygiad y setliad datganoli.

1. Cyn ateb y cwestiwn ar ddulliau rhyng-lywodraethol mae'n bwysig i edrych ar hanes y berthynas rhwng adrannau Llywodraeth San Steffan a Llywodraeth Cymru. Efallai, mae'r peth cyntaf i nodi ydi nad oes yna ddealltwriaeth gywir o natur datganoli ymysg gweision sifil Llundain nac aelodau o'r Llywodraeth ychwaith. Mae hyn yn creu dryswch ac oedi di-angen pan y mae Llywodraeth Cymru a'r Cynulliad Cenedlaethol yn mynnu newid deddfwriaethol. O bosib hefyd mae rhan o'r broblem ydi natur y setliad presennol oherwydd cymhlethdod y model ble mae rhai meysydd polisi yn cael eu rhannu cydrhwng y ddau ddeddfwrfa. Cofiw'n am y tri sialens Goruchaf Lys a oedd, i bob pwrpas, yn ceisio esboniad i'r cwestiynau dyrys hyn. Rhaid oedd i'r barnwyr yn y Goruchaf Lys werthuso'r setliad presennol gan geisio llunio ble y mae'r ffiniau yn bodoli.
2. Fel mae'r Pwyllgor yn ymwybodol un o'r achosion yma oedd yr achos yn ymwneud a chyflogau gweithwyr amaethyddol a dymuniad Cymru i barhau efo corff fel Bwrdd Cyflogau Amaethyddol a ddiddymwyd gan Lywodraeth San Steffan. Cawsom sefyllfa ble yr oedd bron bopeth yn ymwneud ag amaeth wedi ei ddatganoli ond ar fater mor sylfaenol a chyflogaeth dywed Llywodraeth y Deyrnas Unedig mae mater iddynt hwy oedd hyn. Mae'n anodd gweld sut oedd hi'n bosib i gyfiawnhau eu safiad gan ystyried pa mor greiddiol i'r sector amaethyddol, a'r economi yn deillio ohono, y mae'r cwestiwn o lefelau cyflog.

3. Ar ôl dau achos arall, fe sylweddolwyd bod yn rhaid gweithredu eto ar newid cyfansoddiadol i osgoi gorfod mynd ac achosion niferus drudfawr gerbron y Goruchaf Lys.
4. Felly dyma dderbyn bod angen newid yr oedd llawer ohonom wedi dadlau o'i blaid ers rhai blynyddoedd sef y Model Neilltuedig tebyg i'r hyn a weithredir ers rhai blynyddoedd yn Senedd yr Alban. Mae'r newid hwn yn golygu bod meysydd polisi wedi'w datganoli'n llwyr oni neilltuwyd y maes hwnnw. Yn ddi-os, fe ddylid gweld llai o sialensau yn mynd i'r Llysoedd pan weithredir Y Ddeddf Cymru arfaethedig, a da o beth fydd hynny.
5. Un o'r elfennau ydi'r uchod. Y llall ydi nad oes digon o hyfforddiant wedi cael ei roi i weision sifil San Steffan nac ychwaith i Weinidogion y Llywodraeth yno ar sut y mae y setliad i fod i weithio yn hwylus. Mae'n ddrwg gennyf ddweud, ond mae'n amlwg i mi nad oes llawer o ddiddordeb gan y cyfeillion yma yn yr holl fater o ddatganoli.
6. Er enghraifft, pan fy cwynion am y ffaith fod ymgynghoriad gan yr Adran Cyfiawnder wedi mynd allan i gyfreithwyr yng Nghymru a Lloegr yn uniaith Saesneg nid oedd gan y Gweinidogion syniad am Ddeddf yr Iaith Gymraeg, a'r angen am ddarpariaeth ddwyieithog yng Nghymru – yr esgus oedd “mater i'r Cynulliad yw'r iaith Gymraeg”. Ia wrth gwrs, ond tra bo'r Adran Gyfiawnder yn tra arglwyddiaethu ar faterion cyfiawnder yng Nghymru mae'n fater iddynt hwy hefyd! Pwynt amlwg a sylfaenol ond un nad oedd Gweinidogion yr Adran Gyfiawnder wedi crybwyll na deall.
7. Gofid i mi ydi bod rhai adrannau Llywodraethol yn camu'n ôl oddiwrth y Gymraeg. Deng mlynedd a mwy yn ôl roedd y Swyddfa Gartref yn ddeddfol yn cyfieithu pob dogfen bolisi ac ymgynghoriad ond erbyn hyn maent hwythau yn peidio gan amlaf. Tydi hyn ddim yn argoeli'n dda am gydweithrediad hapus rhwng y ddau ddeddfwrfa.

8. Tra felly rwyf yn croesawu'r Model Neilltuol arfaethedig – mae'n rhaid deall na fydd y newid yma yn dod a newid yn niwylliant llywodraeth y Deyrnas Gyfunol ac mae gwir angen hynny wrth symud ymlaen.
9. Gobeithiaf na welwn eto yr angen i unrhyw gyfraith ddrafft o Gymru gael ei danfon i bob adran Llywodaeth y Deyrnas Gyfunol pam fo'r newid honno yn effeithio ddim ond ar un maes polisi. Mae'n anhygoel o beth ond dyna fu yn digwydd gan greu mwy o ddryswch a rhagor o oedi – dim rhyfedd bod anniddigrwydd yng Nghaerdydd o ystyried yn y gorffennol bod un rheoleiddiad bach yn ymwneud a newid bychan ym myd amaeth wedi cymeryd 15 i 18 mis i weld golau dydd ar y llyfr statud yng Nghaerdydd, a hynny'n bennaf oherwydd i'r drafft orfod cael ei gymeradwyo gan bob Adran o'r Llywodraeth. Mae engreifftiau fel yna yn dwyn anfri ar y ddau Sefydliad ac yn gwneud hi'n annos i gyd-symud a chydweithredu er lles pobl Cymru.
10. Rhaid cofio, wrth gwrs, y bydd aml i faes llywodraethol heb ei eithrio ac felly bydd angen y cydweithrediad yma hyd yn oed o dan y model arfaethedig newydd sy'n gynwysedig yn Y Ddeddf Cymru dichonadwy.

Sut y mae cysylltiadau rhyng-lywodraethol wedi datblygu ac esblygu, yr hyn a oedd yn llwyddiannus, ac y mae'r cysylltiadau hyn wedi effeithio ar y setliad datganoli.

1. Pan oeddwn yn Aelod o Bwyllgor Dethol Cyfiawnder y Senedd yn Llundain rhan o orchwyl gwaith y Pwyllgor eithaf pwerus hwnnw oedd adrodd ar Lywodraethu Da yn y tiroedd a enwyd y Tiriogaethau Tramor. Yn eu mysg y mae Ynys Manaw ac Ynysoedd y Sianel – tra yn ymweld a Llywodraeth a phrif gyfreithwyr Jersey a Guernsey fe glywais llawer o gwyno ganddynt bod cyfreithiau drafft ganddynt yn disgyn i rhyw bwl di-waelod pan oeddynt yn gorfod danfon y drafftiau i San Steffan. Roedd hyn, a credaf ei fod yn parhau heddiw , yn bwnc llosg ac yn gynnen fawr yn eu perthynas a Llywodraeth Llundain.

Roedd hyn yn fwy poenus i Ynysoedd y Sianel oherwydd yn aml newidiadau yn ymwneud a marchnadoedd arian oeddynt ac wrth gwrs mae rheini yn gyfrifol am ran helaethaf o'u economïau. Ymhellach, fel mae pawb yn gwybod, mae angen symud yn gyflym iawn i wneud newidiadau o'r fath os nad ydynt am fethu a bod yn gystadleuol yn y farchnad fuddsoddi/ariannol byd eang.

2. Dywedwyd wrthyf eu bod hwythau yn gorfod mynd i'r Llysoedd er mwyn sicrhau bod Llywodraeth Llundain yn symud pethau yn gynt ac yn dangos mwy o awch i gydweithredu'n briodol efo nhw.
3. Pan rwyf yn sôn am “ddiwylliant” gweision sifil a Gweinidogion Llundain gobeithio bod profiadau Caerdydd a St Helier ac eraill yn esbonio fy nefnydd o'r gair hwnnw.

The Australian Senate Standing Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee is pleased to provide the following information to the Constitutional and Legislative Affairs Committee of the Welsh Parliament, relating to the inquiry 'A stronger voice for Wales: engaging with Westminster and the devolved institutions'.

The committee

Established as a standing committee in 1970, the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Committee (the committee) can inquire into legislation and other matters as they are referred by the Senate. The committee routinely enquires into matters associated with family law, constitutional law, criminal law, and administrative law. A number of times each year the committee also takes evidence from the Attorney-General's Department and associated agencies, and the Department of Immigration and Border Protection, as part of the Senate estimates process.

A database of all inquiries completed by this committee can be found here: http://www.aph.gov.au/Parliamentary\_Business/Committees/Senate/Legal\_and\_Constitutional\_Affairs/Completed\_inquiries.

Outline

This paper will outline the relations between the Australian Commonwealth State and Territory Governments, as well as the Commonwealth Government's inter-institutional relations in the Asia-Pacific region and beyond.

Establishing the Commonwealth of Australia

In 1900 the British Parliament passed legislation to establish the Australian Constitution, which enabled the six then-colonies to govern themselves as the Commonwealth of Australia. The Act came into force on 1 January 1901. The British Monarch (as represented by the Governor-General) is Australia's head of state, and is vested with the executive power of the Commonwealth. In practice, executive power is exercised by the Prime Minister of Australia and Cabinet, and the Governor-General acts based on their advice.

Australia's Constitution establishes the parameters for the way in which the Commonwealth Government interacts with State and Territory Governments. It establishes that the Commonwealth Government can only legislate in relation to matters set out in the Constitution (primarily in section 51). States have plenary power to legislate. Section 51(xxxvii), known as the 'referral power', enables the Parliament of any State to refer matters to the Parliament of the Commonwealth, but so that the law shall only extend to States which referred that matter, or which afterwards adopted the law in question.

Intergovernmental relations between the Commonwealth, State and Territory Governments

The Commonwealth Government interacts with the State and Territory Governments in a number of ways. Two of the formal means by which this takes place are through meetings of the Council of Australian Governments (COAG), and the Commonwealth Grants Commission (CGC).

The CGC was established in 1933 to help address the imbalance in access to revenue sources between the States and Territories, the barriers of which were drawn up with a limited understanding of Australia's geography and natural resources. The CGC can advise the Commonwealth Government that particular States should be given Financial Assistance Grants for government services, to help ensure that citizens can access comparable levels of schooling, health care, justice and transport regardless of where they live.

COAG is the peak Australian intergovernmental forum. COAG members include the Prime Minister of Australia, the first Ministers of each State and Territory, and the President of the Australian Local Government Association. COAG typically meets twice a year to discuss matters of national significance, and other matters which require coordinated action from all Australian governments. Where COAG makes a formal agreement, this may be contained within intergovernmental agreements. Such agreements have included agreements relating to the funding of public hospitals, the sharing of criminal history information, disability insurance, counter-terrorism, and consumer law. In some instances an intergovernmental agreement may be a precursor to legislation, for example, in the case of the development of Australia's (now) national consumer law system.

As explained above, the Commonwealth Government, and State and Territory Governments may work cooperatively in order to legislate in relation to matters which require a concerted effort (for example, matters in relation to which the States have the power to legislate, but only in relation to their State alone). In such instances, the State Governments may negotiate to:

- refer their power to legislate to the Commonwealth Government so that a national scheme can be implemented; or
- agree to adopt one single piece of model legislation.

Such negotiations typically take place via the COAG forum.

Commonwealth Government inter-institutional relations

The Commonwealth Government maintains close relationships with other nations via diplomatic channels, and through the sharing of information relating to global security, trade, and the environment.

The Commonwealth Government connects with governments and institutions in the Asia-Pacific Region (and beyond) in a number of ways, including via:

- Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) forum;
- Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN);
- ASEAN Regional Forum;
- Asia-Europe Meeting (ASEM)

Australia also engages with a number of other international organisations, including the United Nations, G20, Commonwealth of Nations, World Trade Organization, and OECD.

Closing remarks

Australia's formal legal relationship with the United Kingdom differs vastly from that of Wales. While Australia retains its formal legal relationship with the United Kingdom, and the British Monarch is Australia's Head of State, in practice, the Monarch's representative the Governor-General acts on the advice of the Prime Minister and his or her Ministers. By contrast, the Welsh National Assembly and Welsh Government have gradually gained law-making powers from the British Parliament, including a recent vote in 2011 to give the National Assembly greater law-making powers.

The committee thanks the Constitutional and Legislative Affairs Committee of the Welsh Parliament for the opportunity to provide this information.

If you have further questions we would be pleased to discuss these with you.

‘Westminster and the devolved institutions’

These are some short answers to some general questions that will likely arise in my oral evidence (22 May, 1.15pm) to the Constitutional and Legislative Affairs Committee inquiry called A stronger voice for Wales: engaging with Westminster and the devolved institutions.

Could you outline your area of research expertise?

I use theories of public policy to understand policymaking, focusing on particular areas such as the UK (and Scotland in particular), issues such as tobacco policy, and themes such as ‘the politics of evidence-based policymaking’ and policy learning or transfer.

Could you elaborate on the “Scottish approach” to policymaking?

There are several related terms, including the:

- ‘Scottish policy style’, which academics use to describe two policymaking reputations – (i) for consulting well with stakeholders while making policy, and (ii) for trusting public bodies to deliver policy.
- ‘Scottish model of policymaking’, described by former Permanent Secretary Sir John Elvidge, stressing the benefits of reducing departmental silos and a having a scale of policymaking conducive to cooperation (and the negotiation of common aims) between central government and the public sector.
- ‘Scottish Approach to Policymaking’ (described by former Permanent Secretary Sir Peter Housden), stressing key principles about how to describe the relationship between research/ policy delivery (‘improvement method’), communities and service users (an ‘assets based’, not ‘deficit focused’ approach), and central government/ public bodies/ stakeholders in policymaking and delivery (‘co-production’).

Each term describes a reputation or aspiration for policymaking, and you'll tend to find in my published work (click the 'PDF' links) a healthy scepticism about the ability of any government to live up to these aims.

Also note that the Scottish style (as with discussions of Welsh policymaking) tends to be praised in comparison with a not-flattering description of UK government policymaking.

In relation to your comments around “size or scale” of Scottish Government, would similar traits be observed in policy-making in Wales and Northern Ireland, or indeed in other small political systems?

Yes. In fact, we have included a comparison with Wales in previous studies of ‘territorial policy communities’ (both have the ‘usual story of everybody knowing everybody else’) and the potential benefits of more consensual approaches to delivery (both display ‘less evidence of a fragmentation of service delivery organisations or the same unintended consequences associated with the pursuit of a top-down policy style’).

These size and scale issues have pros and cons. Small networks can allow for the development of trust between key people, and for policy coordination to be done more personally, with less reliance on distant-looking regulations. Small government capacity can also prompt over-reliance on some groups in policy development which, on occasion, can lead to optimistic plans (when doing interviews in Wales in 2006, the example I remember was homelessness policy). Smallness might also prompt overly romantic expectations about the ability of closer cooperation, on a smaller scale, to resolve policy conflict. Yet, we also know that people often have very fixed beliefs and strong views, and that politics is about making ‘hard choices’ to resolve conflict.

Could you explain the importance of personal relationships to policy-making and implementation?

I think they relate largely to psychology in general, and the specific potential effects of the familiarity and trust that comes with regular personal interaction. Of course, one should not go too far, to assume that personal relationships are necessarily good or less competitive. For example, imagine a room containing some people representing the Welsh Government and all the University Vice Chancellors. Sometimes, it will aid collective policymaking. Sometimes, the VCs would rather hold bilateral discussions to help them compete with the others.

To what extent are territorial policy communities too “cosy” with their respective Governments?

You’ll find in many discussions a reference to ‘the usual suspects’ and the idea of ‘capture’, to describe the assertion that close contact leads to favouritism from both sides. It is helpful to note that any policymaking system will have winners and losers. You can take this for granted in larger and more openly competitive systems, but have to look harder in smaller venues. We would need to avoid telling the same romantic story about Welsh consensus politics and, instead, to design ‘standard operating procedures’ to gather many diverse sources of evidence and opinion routinely.

Could you expand on the extent to which key UK policies impact on devolved policies?

Compared to many countries, the devolved UK governments have more separate arrangements. For example, ‘health policy’ is far more devolved than in, say, Japan (in which multiple levels make policy for hospitals).

Yet, there are always overlaps in relation to economic issues (the UK is largely responsible for devolved budgets, taxation, immigration, etc.), shared responsibilities in cross-cutting issues (such as fuel poverty), and the ‘spillover’ effects of UK policies.

The classic case of spillovers in Wales is higher education/ tuition fees policy, partly because so many staff and students live within commuting distance of the Wales/ England border. Each Welsh policy has been in response to, or with a close eye on, policy for England. There was also the case of NHS policy in the mid-2000s, where Welsh government attempts to think more holistically about healthcare/ public health were undermined somewhat by unflattering comparisons of England/ Wales NHS waiting times. In Scotland, these issues are significant, even if less pronounced.

To what extent is the multi-level nature of policy-making downplayed?

I’d say that it is not sufficiently apparent in any election campaign at any level. People don’t seem to know (and/ or care) about the divisions of responsibilities across levels of government, which makes it almost impossible to hold particular governments to account for particular policy decisions. It’s often not fair to hold certain governments to account for policy outcomes (since they are the result of policies at many levels, and often out of the control of policymakers) but we can at least encourage some clarity about their choices.

Could you expand on the “intergovernmental issues” you refer to in a recent article? Do you have any examples and how these were resolved?

I'd encourage you to speak with my Centre on Constitutional Change colleagues on this topic, since (for example) Professors Nicola McEwen and Michael Keating may have more recent knowledge and examples.

In general, I'd say that IGR issues have traditionally been resolved rather informally, and behind closed doors, particularly but not exclusively when both governments were led by the same party. Formal dispute resolution is far less common in the UK than in most comparator countries. Within the UK, the Scottish Government has not faced the same problem as the Welsh Government, which has faced far more Supreme Court challenges in relation to its competence to pass legislation in devolved areas. Yet, in the past, we have seen similar early-devolution examples of 'fudged' decisions, including on 'free personal care' in Scotland (it gained far more in the 'write-off' of council house debt than it lost in personal care benefits) and EU structural funds in Wales (when the UK initially refused to pass on money from the EU, then magically gave the Welsh Government the same amount another way).

Is there any evidence of devolved Governments and the UK Government learning from one another in terms of policy?

Not as much as you might think (or hope). When we last wrote about this in 2012, we found that the UK government was generally uninterested in learning from devolved policy (not surprising) and there was very little Scottish-Welsh learning (more surprising), beyond isolated examples like the Children's Commissioner (and, at a push, prescription charging and smoking policy). I recently saw a powerpoint presentation showing very few private telephone calls between Scotland Wales, so perhaps it's not so surprising!

In general, we'd expect most policy learning or transfer to happen when at least one government is motivated by a sense of closeness to the other, which can relate to geography, but also ideological closeness or a sense that governments are trying to solve similar problems in similar ways. Yet, the Scottish and Welsh governments often face quite different initial conditions relating to their legislative powers, integration with UK policy, and starting points (for example, they have very different education systems). So, we should not assume that they have a routine desire to learn from each other, or that there would be a clear payoff.

What is the likely impact of the UK's withdrawal from the EU on policy-making in the devolved nations?

I have no idea! The Scottish Government wants to use the event to prompt greater devolution in some areas (such as immigration) and secure the devolution of Europeanised issues (such as agriculture, fishing, and environmental policy).

We should see the practical effect of reduced multi-level policymaking in key areas (even though each government will inherit policies from their EU days) and there are some high profile areas in which things may have been different outside the EU. For example, the Scottish Government would have faced fewer obstacles to enacting its minimum unit price on alcohol (which relates partly to EU rules on the effect of pricing on the ability of firms from other EU countries to compete for market share).

We should also see some 'stakeholder' realignment, since interest groups tend to focus their attention on the venues they think are most important. It will be interesting to see the effects on particular groups, since only the larger groups (or the best connected) are able to maintain effective contacts with many levels of government.

What is your view on Whitehall departments' understanding of devolution in Wales and Scotland?

The usual story is that: (a) London-based policy people tend to know very little about policy in Edinburgh or Cardiff (it's also told about UK interest groups with devolved arms), (b) devolved-facing UK government units tend to have heroically small numbers of staff, and (c) there are few 'standard operating procedures' to ensure that devolved governments are consulted on relevant UK policies routinely. I can't think of an academic text that tells a different story about the UK-devolved relationship.

That said, it's difficult to argue that policymakers in Brussels know a great deal about Wales either, and the Cardiff-London train ticket is cheaper if you want to go somewhere to complain about being ignored.

How would you assess the success of stakeholder influence in policy making? What does this say about the effectiveness of stakeholder engagement?

I'd describe winners and losers. Perhaps we might point to a general sense of more open or consensual policymaking in the devolved venues, but also analyse such assumptions critically. In any system, you'll find a similar logic to consulting with the usual suspects, often because they have the resources to lobby, the power to deliver policy, or the professional knowledge or experience most relevant to policy. In any system, you'll struggle to measure stakeholder influence. If describing the benefits of more devolved policymaking, I'd find democratic/ principled arguments (about more tailored representation) more convincing than 'evidence-based' ones.

Do you have any views about whether powers over, for example, agriculture should go to London or to the devolved nations?

No. I'll take my views on all constitutional matters to the grave.

Response from: Professor Thomas Glyn Watkin

1. I should like to thank the Committee for the invitation to submit written evidence to it in relation to this inquiry, and for the subsequent notification of the extended period permitted for the submission of evidence. The opinions expressed in this paper are entirely my own and do not represent the views of any body or institution with which I am or have been associated. I have to admit that I was in two minds as to whether I had anything of value to say on this issue as my direct knowledge and experience of inter-institutional working between Wales and Westminster is limited to my time as Legislative Counsel during the Third Assembly, a period now perhaps more of historical interest than of direct relevance to the inquiry. Indeed, even then, the occasions on which I was directly involved in discussions with UK institutions, as opposed to having to deal with the outcomes of such negotiations, were very few in number. However, the similarities between what I experienced then and more recent experience of involvement in discussions leading up to the passing of the Wales Act 2017 have led me to believe that things may not have changed as much as the length of time which has passed might lead one to suppose.

Experience during the Third Assembly (2007–11)

2. Towards the end of the Third Assembly, I gave evidence to this Committee as First Welsh Legislative Counsel.<sup>1</sup> This related to the difficulties which had been experienced in delivering the Welsh Government's legislative programme under the devolution settlement contained in Part 3 and Schedule 5 of the Government of Wales Act 2006. Under that model of

<sup>1</sup> Constitutional Affairs Committee, CA(3)-04-10 : Paper 1 : 4 February 2010, and the transcript of that meeting.

devolution, the Assembly acquired legislative competence incrementally through the periodical insertion of matters into the 20 fields set out in Part 1 of Schedule 5, which matters could be inserted either by Act of Parliament or through the making of Orders in Council, commonly referred to as Legislative Competence Orders or LCOs. I shall not repeat the evidence given by myself and Mr. Huw G. Davies, Senior Welsh Legislative Counsel, on that occasion regarding my Office's experience of the work. Suffice it to say that the experience had been very frustrating. The extent of the legislative competence to be enjoyed by the Assembly under Part 4 and Schedule 7 of the 2006 Act following a successful referendum was already known, as the 20 headings in Part 1 of Schedule 7 already had listed under them the subjects in relation to which Parliament had decided that the Assembly should be competent to legislate. Those 20 headings corresponded to the 20 fields in Schedule 5. They were in the main empty, matters having yet to be incrementally inserted into them. It was agreed that it was not anticipated that all of the subjects under a heading in Schedule 7 should be transferred into a field in Schedule 5 at any one time, but that each field should grow incrementally. It seemed therefore that what was intended was that the subjects already identified as being suitable for devolved legislative competence should be inserted into Schedule 5 individually or in groups as required to deliver the Welsh legislative programme. This however was not what happened. Following an initial attempt to proceed in this manner, it became apparent that the UK Government was not prepared to confer as broad a competence upon the Assembly as that given by Schedule 7 even in relation to the individual subjects identified there. Instead, each matter was subjected to sometimes very considerable limitations and exceptions which had not been imposed by Parliament when enacting the provisions of Schedule 7. Perhaps the classic example of this can be seen by comparing the text of the proposed Environment LCO promoted by the Welsh Government and agreed by the Assembly in 2007 with the eventual Environment LCO approved by Parliament following lengthy negotiations with the UK Government in 2010.<sup>2</sup>

3. The difficulties encountered in obtaining legislative competence during the Third Assembly seemed to be reproduced in the deliberations leading up to the Wales Act 2017, and the manner in which reserved matters – especially the specified reserved matters – are defined in that Act recall the manner in which matters had been defined for insertion into Schedule 5. It is also in my view significant that little seems to turn on the political complexion of the UK Government in this regard. Many believed at the time of the Third Assembly that problems may have lain more with officials in Whitehall than with UK ministers. The problem would appear to have been an unwillingness to address the issue as one of subsidiarity – “what subjects are most appropriately decided at national level and what subjects need to be retained at State level?” – but rather as one of administrative convenience – “what matters would make my work more difficult if decisions concerning them had to be shared with Wales?” The devolution of legislative competence appears to turn on the convenience or inconvenience of administrative decentralization rather than respect for any right to national self-determination.

4. It is difficult to separate this problem, if it is recognized, from the manner in which devolution has been pursued within the United Kingdom, and in particular from the dual rôle of the UK Government as being both the government of the UK as a sovereign state and also the government of England regarding matters which are not devolved. Until the imbalance of power and sometimes the conflict of interest which results from this situation is satisfactorily addressed, I do not believe that a lasting constitutional settlement will be achieved nor that satisfactory inter-institutional relations can be maintained.

5. Silk II recommended the provision of a statutory Code of Practice on intergovernmental relations.<sup>3</sup> It is to be regretted that the Wales Act 2017 did not deliver on this recommendation.

<sup>3</sup> Commission on Devolution in Wales, Empowerment and Responsibility: Legislative Powers to Strengthen Wales, March 2014, ( hereafter Silk II) chapter 5 and recommendation 4.

Cross-Border Issues

6. Silk II also recommended that the Welsh and UK Governments should establish a Welsh Intergovernmental Committee to oversee the operation of the devolution settlement by, amongst other things, resolving cross-border issues.<sup>4</sup>

7. The Wales Act 2017 has addressed two specific cross-border issues by a form of statutory regulation. In relation to cross-border harbours, this involves duties being placed upon both governments to consult one another when exercising certain functions, although in one instance the duty of the UK Minister to consult corresponds to a duty on the Welsh Ministers to obtain consent – an example of the imbalance referred to above.<sup>5</sup>

8. The 2017 Act does however implement to a large extent Silk II's recommendation that a formal intergovernmental protocol should be established with regard to cross-border issues relating to water resources, water supply and water quality, and that the Secretary of State's power of intervention to prevent Assembly bills proceeding to Royal Assent if he or she had reasonable grounds to believe that any of its provisions would have a serious adverse effect on water resources, water supply or water quality in England should be removed in favour of mechanisms under the protocol.<sup>6</sup>

9. The 2017 Act provides for the replacement of the intervention power by a water protocol, and also provides that in exercising functions relating to water resources, water supply and water quality the Welsh Ministers must have regard to the interests of consumers in England and the Secretary of State must have regard to the interests of consumers in Wales,<sup>7</sup> thus introducing a welcome balance between the two governments regarding the exercise of these functions. Pending the development of a more balanced constitutional structure between the governments of the component nations of the United Kingdom, the approach taken with regard to cross-border water issues as between England and Wales may offer the best way forward for the present in relation to cross-border issues affecting the two nations.

Legislative Issues

10. Imbalance however continues to exist with regard to the legislative processes of the two legislatures. Putting aside the issue of the sovereign UK Parliament's power to continue to legislate for the devolved nations even on devolved matters subject to the convention that it will not 'normally' do so without consent,<sup>8</sup> there is also the bone of contention that it legislates in the same sovereign manner when legislating for England only under the procedures regarding 'English Votes for English Laws'. This effectively means that the restrictions placed upon the legislative competence of the devolved legislatures regarding compatibility with EU law and Human Rights legislation do not operate in the same manner with regard to England-only legislation as they do to Wales-only legislation passed by the Assembly. Nor do the same consequences follow from successful challenge. The consequences of devolved legislation straying into matters which are reserved or subject to restriction are therefore materially different from the lack of consequences if England-only legislation wanders across the devolution boundary. England-only legislation is not subject to judicial oversight with regard to competence as are the nation-specific enactments of the devolved legislatures.

11. While with regard to cross-border water issues, Silk II's recommendation relating to the intervention powers of the Secretary of State is potentially poised to bear fruit in the form of a water protocol, the same is not the case with its recommendation that those powers generally should be aligned with those existing in Scotland.<sup>9</sup> Indeed, the 2017 Act gives the Secretary of State a further power to make regulations which can amend, repeal, revoke or modify Assembly legislation without any requirement to obtain the approval of the Assembly for the statutory instrument making the change.<sup>10</sup> It was this provision which so outraged the former Lord Chief Justice, Lord Judge, during the House of Lords debates that he described it as an 'insult to the democratic process' and a 'constitutional aberration'.<sup>11</sup> It will be an interesting test of the legislative balance which it is claimed has been
